Quilter's Annual Show

The young ladies of the White Pine Sagebrush Quilters, showcased their beautiful handmade quilts, at the old WP High School gym, last weekend.

The first two rows of quilts were dedicated to the Veterans. They were very patriotic and colorful, just like the ladies themselves.

Pat, did a great job with the American Flag and the American Eagle.

Janet, used several pieces of cloth of different hues to create this 3D cow quilt.

My favorite quilt, was the one my daughter, Alicia, made for me for Christmas. These quilts take a lot of time and patience over a long period of time. They are incredible works of art.

The young man was brought in from Hollywood Central to pose with the quilt, but of course the quilt was much more spectacular.

The smaller quilts on the extreme right are made for donating to the pre-school kids to rest on and also, some are donated to the police. If you are ever in an accident and given a warm quilt, you can thank the generosity of the quilters.

The Gift Shop at the Cove put on a display of the quilting stuff they handle. Stop in and browse. You may become a "Quilter".

If you missed the show this year, make it a point to attend next time. It is well worth it to see what folks can accomplish with hard work and determination.

McGill News

Finally getting the Drugstore painted. Will be through early next week. Lot of stuff to cover. The next project is to upgrade the exterior. It is in poor shape and needs lots of work. Will have it done soon.
